FYI to those who aren't aware, the Ellipse is outdoors, and 50+ acres.

So, we shouldn't have an issue all getting in.

I have to get home to my PC to give the link but the NPS says they will limit the number in the ellipse to half it's normal 1st amendment event capacity of 175,000. I hope we CAN'T all fit in, because 87.500 would not be a crowd that represents how much we support POTUS.

Multiple pieces of information from Colonel Waldron, etc. presented stated that there was massive internet traffic going to Frankfurt, Germany from the voting machines, so there is other circumstantial evidence that supports it.

The server could always be metaphorical, that they acquired and decrypted all traffic going to it. But from my understanding, the facilities in Germany were probably monitoring and used for a weighted adjudication

What a stupid larp. Do people who keep talking about this even understand what a server is?

A server is not a magic source of truth. It's a fucking computer. It can say whatever someone writes on it, so it would change absolutely zero minds if our side pulls out some server. It's a very weak evidence, much weaker than affidavits of elections workers

I hope I'm wrong, but I suspect 1/6 will just be another big nothing burger. Everyone will be on here the next day like, we knew this all along, trust the plan, the kraken's coming....Oh, but that's "doomer" talk, right. Maybe some people will finally wake up when we take it up the ass again on the sixth.

permalink parent save report block reply

= lurkwellmyfriends 20 points 10 days ago +20 / -0

It will only be a nothing-burger if we allow it to be. As far as the process itself and the speeches, etc, I agree - it will probably be more blue ball bullshit that no one with power and authority will do anything about other than to give an asterisk to the incoming administration.

We the People must establish that ~~we~~ we have the ultimate power and authority. That's what 1/6 is for me, anyway. That's why I think the Q stuff got out of hand - people started to feel like some magical plan was going to take care of everything rather than taking action themselves. I hope they are proven correct in the next two weeks and don't blame people for hoping, but it has turned into submissive, do-nothing coping.

I realize that people still don't understand that America has been subverted, and that the only way out of this is for everyone to get their hands dirty. It's sad and unfortunate, but that's where we're at.

Live on your knees or die on your feet.

The antifa faggots who don't even know which bathroom to use have demonstrated much more fighting spirit.

Jan 6th is not the "last chance to demonstrate that the Second Amendment counts for something." Republicans have always been the party of civility. When all opportunities to resolve this in a 'civil' and legal manner are exhausted then and only then will the Europeans and the rest of the world see why the 2A exists. The Founding Fathers never wrote the 2A into the US Constitution to be utilized arbitrarily or initially.

There are far too many armed civilians and far too much justice to be dispensed to allow for us to quickly put that genie back into the bottle. Solving this matter utilizing legal mechanisms offers the least negative impact on society. A civil war would be very destructive to our country and society as a whole. Society appreciates your patience. Even though our enemies are marching towards us, we're not at the point where we can see the white's of their eyes yet.

all opportunities to resolve this in a 'civil' and legal manner are exhausted

They have, already. There's no scenario in which Trump stays in the White House that doesn't involve either a civil war or martial law.

You can face this fact now, or wait until Biden is elected, or wait until Biden is inaugurated. But by then it will be too late.

Very well said, I think your spot on. I'm not so certain the legal options will prevail because its not like the people behind this give 2 shifts about the ethics of bribing or threatening judges and politicians to make sure their crimes don't come back to negatively effect them, but while we have legal options we should use them before any escalation. Its what separates us from them.

Also great touch at the end there.

The fact is the system is hopelessly corrupt and controlled by leftist globalist elites. We all want to believe there are good guys in the upper ranks who are fighting for America, but in reality it's likely only Trump and literally a handful of others.

Yes, it's that bad and it's not getting fixed from the inside. This is the greatest gift Trump has given America, opening our eyes to just how corrupt and evil the government has become.

Yuuuup, people in the know have known that he has had the pre-doctored election data from the Scyt1 raid all the way back in November.

He's basically soft-threatening the corrupt motherfuckers that they will start WWIIIIII if they try to go through with the coup. I figure there's going to be a "public" component and a "backdoor" component.

Exactly. A lot of guys who have never had to make a decision with life or death consequences, don't understand how much that can weigh on you. Even if you're 100% right, you still can seek to mitigate damage. The president sincerely loves America. He knows the fraud cannot stand, yet also wants to minimize the damage to the nation and our institutions, when it comes to defeating the fraudsters.

The average 2nd Lt. in the military even experiences this. One year, not long after his commission, an army officer's entire Christmas was ruined by three separate soldiers getting DUIs. He had to write them up, yet he didn't want to. Even though these soldiers were the worst in the platoon, they were still part of HIS platoon, and it pained him to have to punish them.

A good man, when granted power, always makes sure he is doing all he can to exercise that power for the greater good.

The problem is, that there comes a point where you have to be severe, to protect the people and things that you love. The Deep State is led by relentless sociopaths, who cannot compromise, and who will destroy everything they can, as a result of their defeat.

The President will have no choice other than to act decisively. He has given them every chance to yield. They have completely rebuffed him. He now will have to become severe leader he once wished he'd never be, if only for the good of the nation.

Wishful thinking.

If Trump had any power, the demonrats would be in jail by now.

The reason I say this is that even if Trump was to magically win a second term by Biden conceding to the fraud, it still leaves the country in the downward trend towards communism. Trump had accomplished pretty much zero during his first term.

Civil war is the only way out.

The president is just one man with constitutionally limited powers if 95% of government won't cooperate with him there's not much he can do.

He's not an absolute monarch he can't just order a congressmen to be publically flogged for disobeying him.

The fact that he hasn't conceded, is an indication that he has the goods on these bastards.

The protest will provide him with a level of support, that will allow him to effectively reveal everything. Any would-be assassin will be rattled by the presence of so many patriots, and will not be able to operate nearly as freely as they would have, otherwise.

The president has found a way to use the loyalty of the people, his main asset, in order to neutralize the Deep State, which will create an environment in which he can expose the enemy like never before.

Hearing grievances in congress means nothing if there are no alternative electors. Neither a majority of the house or senate will vote in favor of Trump. He can present all the evidence he wants but it will just delay the certification.he needs our help to win at this point, we are his last hope.

What the fuck do you think the 2A means?

It says, in no uncertain terms, that every citizen is allowed arms, without exception. Period.

There's not a fucking peep in there about exceptions, gun-free zones, age limits, state interpretations, or banned types. None.

We are given this right by GOD. And the constitution reminds the government that this right is not negotiable. Every single gun law is null and void.

It's not about getting portrayed in a bad light, fren. It's about approaching a potential combat operation with the logistics, training, and organization that a combat operation demands.

Or, fine, go ahead and play guns at an event that 50-75% of Trump-supporting attendees are treating as a typical protest/demonstration. A lot of people are bringing their kids.

How many people on this forum do you know personally? How many have you run drills with? Are you expecting a revolutionary army to spring up organically on Jan. 6?

Everyone's gung-ho approach to this situation simultaneously terrifies me for our side's safety and suggests that absolutely nothing will happen on a meaningful scale.

The problem isn't the numbers or the preponderance of the evidence. The problem is the left don't care. When one side does not care about rules, regulations, what is right or the constitution then none of this matters. We need our President to take more direct approach at this point or everything will be going down the tubes and nothing will ever matter again in our country.

We need more then words now. We need a "direct" approach that is more action and less words. All elections after this, the people, and our freedom guarded by our sacred constitution will never be able to work again.

Communism is here. The lockdowns and authoritarianism is here and elitism with the few ruling the many is now in full effect. It is now or never.

Imagine speeding 20mph over the speed limit, because you don't care. Well, the officer pulling you over and ticketing you does care, and you get punished.

The problem is they're immune from consequences.
